

On Thursday July 22, eleven FOSM volunteers hiked to Un Poquito Trail in Cold Canyon to continue work on a series of realignments which will move the trail up out of the drainage. It was another cool, pleasant morning in the well-named canyon, and though a bit humid, temps stayed friendly into the afternoon. Volunteers made steady progress, benching new tread into the sideslope on terrain that was generally less steep than during the last outing. By the end of the day the crew was able to connect to the old trail at both ends of a long rerouted section; next session we will begin by closing off the old trail, making the new reroute “official.”

Heigh-ho...

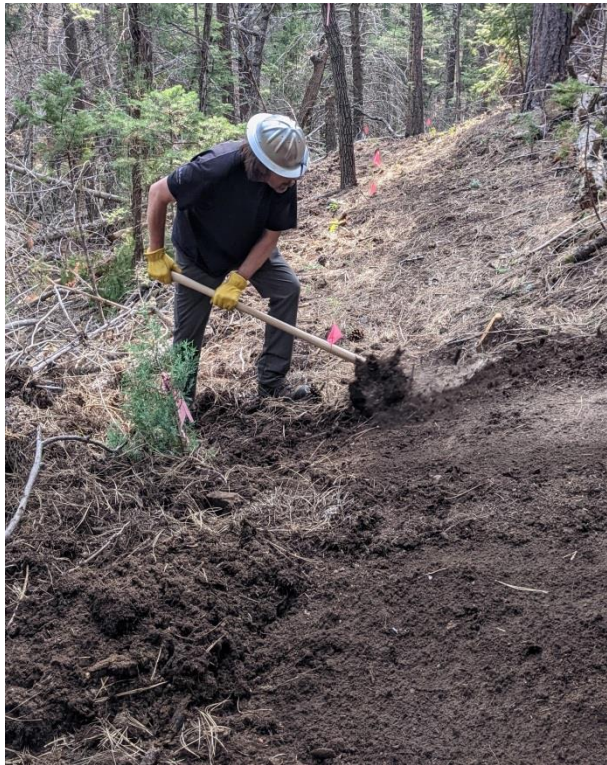

Digging out a high-stump

Which tool will you pick...? (get it?)

Remove some duff

Move some dirt

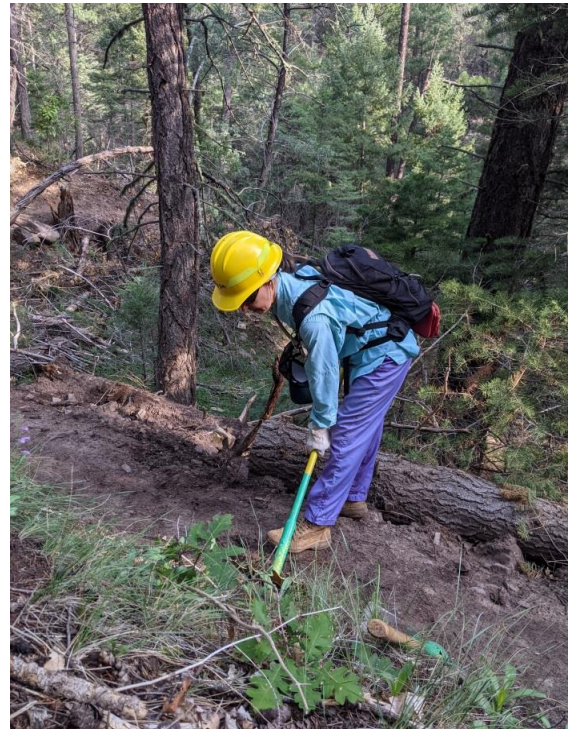

Add some drainage

Move some more dirt

Making progress

Finish work

A couple of before & after's

