

Before: The old sign board near the Horse Bypass pay station has seen better days.

First hole: Surprisingly, no rocks to fight but damp dirt got packed hard on the auger.

Second hole got punched right in. Whoa! A little deep on this one.

Ok, let's line up the first two posts.

Now we're making progress. Install the templates and keep checking with that level.

Come on boys! Work that mud! Let's set the first two posts before lining up the third.

Mud in the hole. Keep those posts plumb!

Let's clean off the sloped concrete. These posts are expensive.

With enough minds and hands working together, the third post is positioned.

Look at that! Dead level. Is the boss good on that auger or what?

After: The templates come off, the panels will be installed, and the REI-provided kiosk will be finished.

The wet winter encouraged grass growth on the trail. One crew member took some time to clear it.

Final task: A few well-placed boulders will discourage random parking near the road.

Another boulder is put in place to discourage parking on the ridge.
