

The lower end of the section starts to get tied in to the old user trail.

A smooth transition from the new trail section connects to the user trail.

An intersection to the lower end of TC08 is cut into the trail headed up Cold Valley.

Intersection is finished. Future sessions will extend the lower end of TC08 down into the canyon.

Final trail tuning down to the intersection. The bypassed section of old logging road was obliterated.

A couple of new guys joining the crew fit in great and picked up on the process easily.

The upper intersection of TC08 with TC06 turned into a wrestling match with all the rocks.

The upper connection is complete. The tread was basically cut in here by removing rocks.

The crew starts to work their way up TC06.

Section TC06 heads up into the ponderosas. Hey, there are more rocks here than I remember!

Near the end of the session, the crew mostly fought the rocks. Too many rocks everywhere!

And it was dusty! The mud encountered early in the season is now very dry.

Behind the rough-in crew, the finishers create nice tread.

He's hard to see but this little guy was able to escape from the swinging trail tools.

And it was time for the scarlet hedgehog cactus to show their colors...

...along with the western wallflowers.
