

Crew members pin flag the remaining 0.07 miles of Section TC06 in preparation for the next session.

Next task: last year a crew bypassed this turn in the trail. Time to get er' done!

On the lower end of the section, a lot of oak had to be cut out and the tread leveled.

Much of this turn involved pulling out rocks and cutting back the steep backslope.

Coming out of the turn, we dealt with the usual roots, backslope, rocks, and tread leveling.

Finished turn on TC06. Quite a bit of this section has very steep sideslope.

Another task was cutting this ponderosa deadfall off the upper section of TC06.

Hmmm, we tried to help this old wooden trail sign but it's near the end of a very long life.

Maybe this was the reason to name the trail Madera Locura?

This week it was the wayside gromwell's turn to bloom.
